Why Sponsor?

The Tradeswomen Leadership Institute (TLI) is an annual event produced by Oregon Tradeswomen in collaboration with the Labor Education Research Center (LERC) at the University of Oregon. The purpose of this event is to facilitate leadership development, advocacy skills, and unity among all women working in the building, construction, mechanical and utility trades. Oregon Tradeswomen deliberately creates an environment where women can connect across differences: age, trade, race, sexual orientation, gender-identity, and especially whether we work in a union, open-shop, or residential environment.

Oregon Tradeswomen has worked hard with our dedicated planning committee of tradeswomen to create a relevant and productive program. We will have workshops covering key issues that meet the experience, interests, and needs of women working in the trades; powerful speeches and presentations from regional leaders, and plenty of time to celebrate what it means to be a tradeswoman and build social supports.

Oregon Tradeswomen supports leadership training throughout the year. Activities range from attending trainings produced by outside agencies (such as LERC), Oregon Tradeswomen sponsored training, and opportunities to engage in leadership activities. Oregon Tradeswomen also encourages and assists tradeswomen to pursue leadership within unions, places of employment, and the community.
